This deal will upgrade the IT infrastructure of JGSHI and enable the organization to efficiently process business transactions; communicate better internally and externally; collaborate with customers and business partners; and generate information critical in making decisions.

To this end, HP will consolidate and construct a new data center to centralize (e.g., via helpdesk) and standardize (e.g., via tools such as HP OpenView) IT services for JGSHI operations. Having HP build a shared services infrastructure that is in line with JGSHI's overall business strategy will enable the conglomerate to improve its services, and facilitate the acquisition and merging of new businesses at a technological level.

The consolidation of these services will serve to streamline JGSHI's operations by enabling the business to divest itself from IT processes that can be managed by HP, thereby allowing it to centralize its efforts on developing its core competencies.

"This partnership with HP will allow us to increase our efficiencies and focus more on the core needs of our business", said Lance Gokongwei, JGSHI President and COO.

"HP is proud to have been chosen by JGSHI. We are ready to implement the full use of our technologies in order to add to the competitive advantage of one of the Philippines' largest and globally competitive corporations," said David Tan, managing director of HP Philippines.
